cookie policy

What are cookies?

Cookies are small, simple textfiles on your harddisk when you visit a webpage. These cookies can provide functionalities to optimize your website visit. Cookies can, for example, save your preferences to make sure you only see information relevant to you. Another advantage is that you do not have to sign in every time and information can be filled in for you when you visit a webpage.

Why do we inform you about the use of cookies?

In May 2018 a new EU-regulated law will be in use: General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR). This law states that certain types of cookies can only be used after explicit usage of the visitor. This is why we let you know the reason why we use cookies and what we use them for.

Functional cookies

Functional cookies are neccesary to make the website function. If we do not use these cookies, parts of the website would stop functioning. In this website we make use of cookies to check if you are logged in and as who, and what items you have inserted into your shopping cart.

Analytical cookies

With the help of cookies we gather visitor informaiton. We use Google Analytics to gather this informaiton. Using this informaiton, we can see the way you use the website and what pages use visited more than others. This information is used to improve the website. The informaiton Google collects is is anonymous. No Personal information is stored, so we do not need to ask for your permission to use these cookies. Information gathered by Google Analytics is not shared with third parties
